This session will feature Alfred Baylor, MD and Heidi Kromrei, PhD as well as many other local experts sharing their experiences in developing programs that teach others how to teach. The session will include an overview of what makes a good teacher and education theory; teacher-training program formats; and discussion on best practices. Participants will hear what some local programs have found to be successful and learn about the FD4ME on-line modules available to many SEMCME members

Session Objectives:

By the end of this practical, hands-on session, participants will be able to:

- Explain why the LCME and medical schools are concerned about Teacher Training programs for residents at the hospitals
- Discuss the value, challenges and common approaches in the deliberate training of residents-as- teachers
- State some of the diverse needs and resource limitations that affect the variability in residents-as-teachers curriculum and programs
- Generate an action list of steps to design or improve the residents-as-teachers training at their home institution
